LOUIS SAUTER

My name is Louis Sauter, biologist, and part-time photographer. 20 years ago, I started photography as an art form. Landscape photography was my first love, later I combined landscape photography with model photography. So, I used to work in outside locations. This soon resulted in a project "the four elements", in which I attempted to incorporate the four elements as an aspect determining factor in my photos of nude models in landscape. Black and white photography is powerful, the image is often reduced to the essence. To ensure as little distraction as possible I use artistic nude photography to abstract the image. In my new project "Mother Nature's Daughters" I try to place a vulnerable, yet strong woman in carefully selected outdoor locations.

My knowledge of outside locations in the Netherlands is great thanks to my many years of hike along the Lord's roads in the Netherlands.

Favorite locations where I work out this project, are beaches, dune areas. I also sought refuge in forests in spring, specially those with an exuberant soil vegetation.

A very special environment to which I have pledged my heart are the mud flats and salt marshes in the coastal areas of the Netherlands. My base is in the southwest of the Netherlands where flat muds and salt marshes are common along the Scheldt.

I have exhibited in various places in the Netherlands (Amsterdam, Uift and Kudelstaart - Aalsmeer) and abroad in Miami (USA), Bremen and Hamburg (Germany), Venice (Italy) and Barcelona (Spain).
